A THOUGHT

Do not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth.—Prov. 27:1.

Tomorrow, dost thou say? * * *
This fancy's child, and folly is its father;
wrought on such stuff as dreams are;
and baseless as the fantastic visions of the evening.—Cotton.

FESTIVAL REVEALS ADVANCEMENT OF THIS SECTION

Middlesboro enjoys one of the most fortunate locations of any industrial center in the whole world. Not only does it have millions of dollars in mineral resources all about it, but it is next door to one of the richest agricultural valleys in the Southeast. It is but a step over the mountain into the wonderful agricultural section of Virginia and Tennessee. Powell's Valley is now a highly developed locality, and the products it grows find a ready and profitable market always in the main centers of the Kentucky side. All of these products pass through Middlesboro, and the consequent advantages to all citizens of Middlesboro are incalculable.

Seldom is such a situation found so favorable from every standpoint. We have all the wealth and the resources which comes from coal and iron, and perhaps later from oil, and we have it all out door all the products grown in a rich valley like Powell's. The farmers of Bell, Lee, and Claiborne counties are naturally prosperous, and this prosperity reflects itself in Middlesboro, as the local trading center.

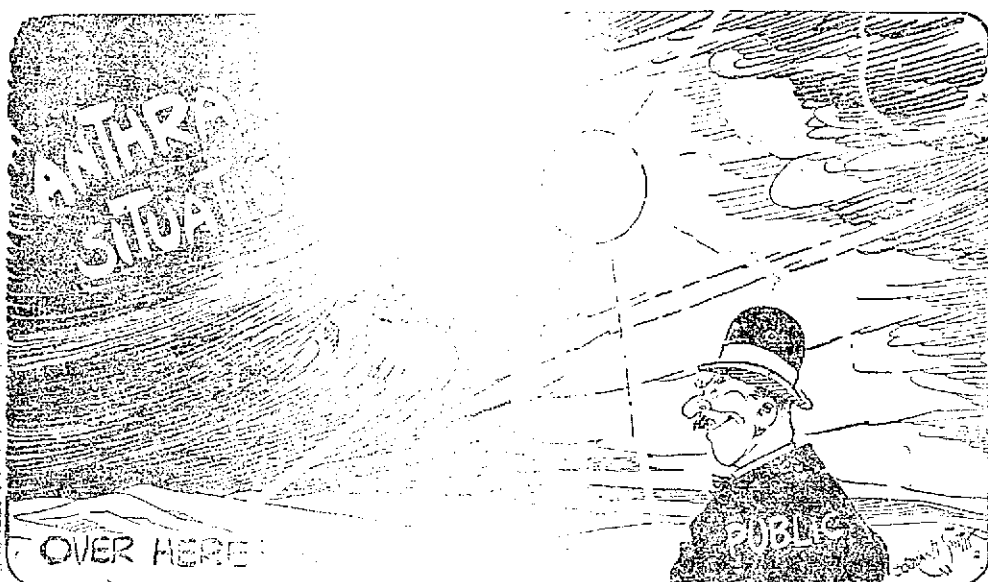

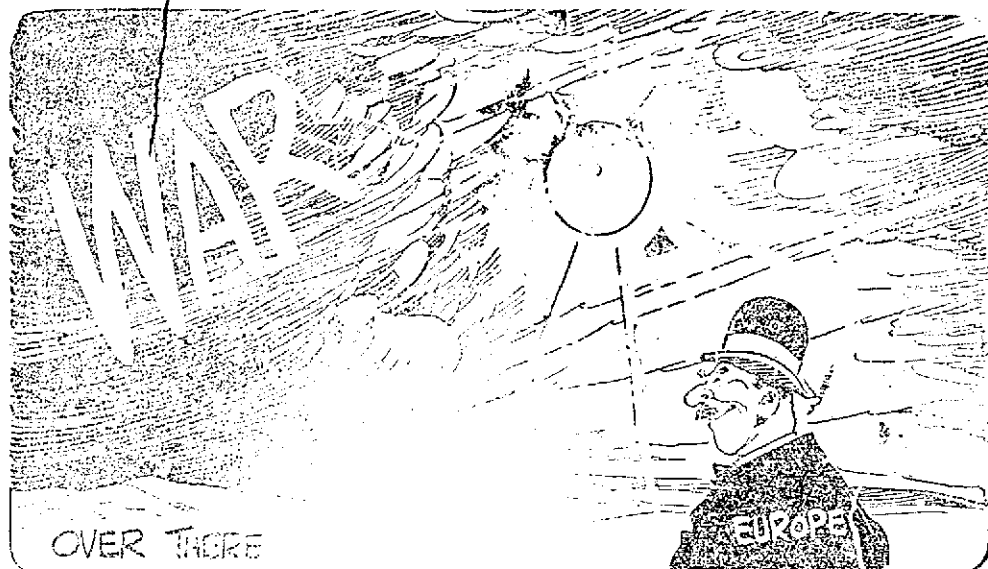

A harmonious relationship between the wholesale and retail merchants of this city, and the farmers in the three counties adjoining is certainly to be desired, and there is nothing that will more definitely promote this spirit than the Harvest Festival which is now to be held every year. Our city is no longer a small town, and the business men know that it is immensely to their advantage to show every courtesy and consideration in their dealings with the neighboring farmers. We want them to come to Middlesboro for their needs, and the time is now at hand when our retail merchants can provide trading advantages equal to Knoxville, Louisville, and Cincinnati. More and more the farmers are coming to realize this and to take advantage of the opportunity.

Middlesboro will be turned over to the visiting farmers during the days of the Festival, and everyone is expecting the occasion to be a great success. It will mean much in promoting good will between the merchants and the farmers, and will undoubtedly stimulate the participants in the Festival in the growing of better products along more scientific lines. It is certainly to be hoped that this second Festival will mark the inauguration of the event as an annual affair.

OUR FALL FAIRS

Our fall fairs are exhibitions of progress in farming. The principal exhibits are formed of products of the soil, of improved livestock and poultry, and of machinery and equipment for the farm and farm home, devised and manufactured to meet the needs of the modern farmer. Without progress in agriculture there would be nothing new to exhibit, nothing to give the farmer ideas and suggestions, or add him in efforts to make farming a more profitable business, and to improve the conditions of rural life.

We will find at fairs held this fall larger and more varied exhibits than were made last year, and better still, exhibits made by farmers who had nothing worth showing twelve months ago. The number of exhibitors of crops, poultry and livestock is on the them. Fair exhibitors can produce better crops. Their power is shared by and when a visitor at last finds fair crops back this fall as an exhibition, the educational features have no agent attraction and the educational features enterprising farmer. A few years ago most of the products of local farmers, cattle, sheep and hogs, were sold at our southern fairs were "show" animals brought in from other states. Now such animals meet strong competitors from the pastures of local breeders, and some of these local breeders have gone to livestock shows at the north and elsewhere and captured international grand championships.

The fairs that have been held in the South in recent years may not have been as large as some of the leading fairs of other sections. Agriculture, along with other lines of business, suffered a serious setback in the sixties, and was some time getting on its feet, while other parts of the country profited by unimpeded progress. But there is now no reason why the Southern fair should not be the best of all. It has more to show, and has everything right at hand to be put on display. According to the Manufacturers' Record the South is now leading the nation in distributing food products in the form of fruits, vegetables, melons, eggs and poultry, amounting to more than 20,000,000 car loads annually. The production of orange butter in the South has more than doubled in one year, reaching into millions of pounds. Says the paper, "There were more hogs in the state of Georgia alone on January 1st, 1923, than in all of the New England states, New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware combined." The Southern Railway Development Service reports 5,335,000 car loads of other than milk cows in the Southern states served by that system in the same time of the Record, which contained a 12-page illustrated story of Southern agricultural development. Nashville reports a livestock market of $10,000,000 annually, a trade over 10,000 carloads of cottonseed and 10,000 carloads of poultry shipped in 1921 from points on the Great Southern Railway system and before shipments on the Norfolk Southern Railway of 11,000 cars as compared with 5,321 carloads of cotton seed, 10,000 cars of fruits and vegetables shipped by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company in 1922, an unbroken string of refrigeration cars on the Louisville and Nashville carrying Southern food products to the North and West, and a general progress in fruit and vegetable growing in the Southern Air Line's territory. The rapid development of farming methods in the South is shown by the fact that the number of acres of cotton is now

THE OPEN FORUM

Salvation Army Japanese Relief Editor, Daily News:

I have been asked if the drives we were putting over for the Japanese Relief Fund is a fraud. Referring me to last evening's paper, I will answer this. The Salvation Army does not do things to defraud the public; we do things to protect them. There is no misleader standing about the drive, and neither is it in any way connected with the Red Cross drive. General Bramwell Booth has asked the army all over the world to raise ten million dollars for the Japanese relief work, and to you, good people of Middlesboro, I can truthfully say every cent of it will be used over there. We have men and women with their sleeves rolled up in Japan doing real relief work. We have a tented village where the unfortunate are housed and fed. The Salvation Army is very strong in Japan and we are also represented in 70 countries and colonies, therefore we are always at hand to render aid before anybody else gets there, and with our trained heads and workers we do a work that speaks for itself.

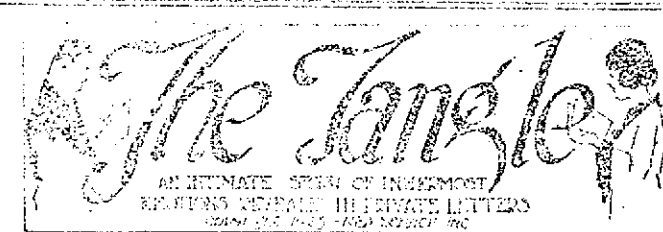

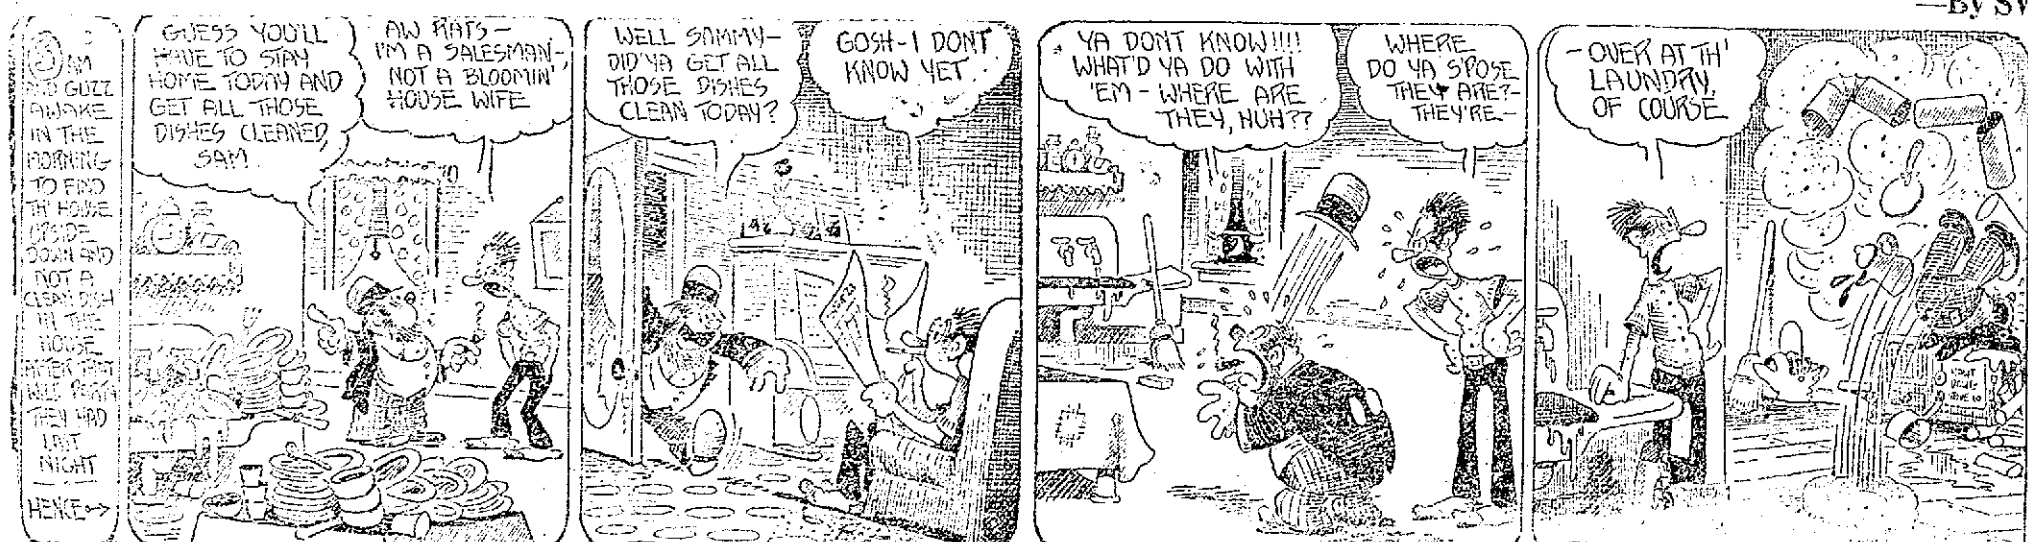

We did it in the war, we do it at home, we do it everywhere. Ask any of the boys that were over in France. We do little boasting; we do practical work. We take the bumps, say little about it. As the old bumper of the Salvation Army will still be standing when these frivolous bumpers will be all helped out.

We are doing now the greatest relief work in Japan that is going on over there, and soon as possible we will give you an official report, backed by the Japanese government. We will also have people coming over from there, pointing out work the same as they did in France, so if anybody says any thing about the Salvation Army, not doing anything in Japan, pass it up as a joke. Let them do the talking. They have time; we haven't, we are working.

We are doing our duty; we are over there and we won't be back 'til it's over over there.

THE TANGLE

BY BEATRICE GRIMSHAW

Dear Sir:
I am very much interested in the chapter you sent me from "The Tangle" and Miss Pickens's part in the story. I was interested in the story for the first time, and I was glad to hear that you were so much interested in it. I remember very well how, even when I was a child, I was interested in the story, and I was glad to hear that you were so much interested in it. I remember very well how, even when I was a child, I was interested in the story, and I was glad to hear that you were so much interested in it.

Do not, I beg of you, dear Sir, think anything of me, but I am sure that I am not alone in the heart of the story. I am sure that I am not alone in the heart of the story.

Yours truly,

Berton Bracey's Poem

UNAPPROPRIATED GOLD
The golden rod is shining.
It's blooming far and wide.
It's fragrance is perfume.
The lovely country side.
It's taking all the highway.
With beauty much revealed.
It's backed along the highway
In masses made of gold.

The golden rod is shining.
And it is fast to grow.
The scent of it is sweet.
It's fragrance is perfume.
It's taking all the highway.
With beauty much revealed.
It's backed along the highway
In masses made of gold.

When we learn how happy a luck
We will tell you how happy this
We should be.

FRENCH ISN'T NECESSARY IN PARIS BECAUSE MONEY TALKS BY ITSELF

PARIS, Sept. 14.—The most difficult person to find in Paris at the present time is the one I expected to see in the greatest numbers—the typical Parisienne.

Having been led to believe since early childhood that this city is the Mecca of fashion and that every stylish woman turned her face to it at least twice a year, I naturally expected to find the streets of Paris swarming with the originals of French drawings I've so frequently admired in fashion journals.

Imagine my surprise to find that the woman I see in the Rue de la Paix or the Avenue de l'Opera or any of the streets in the smart shopping section, dressed just as we dress in any American city, and to hear them all talking plain United States.

Or fancy going to the magnificent Opera House, which is much more gorgeous than any postcard ever portrayed it, and the stronghold of fashion and elegance during the winter season, and hearing not a word of French, except those sung on the stage.

Parisienne Unnecessary

Imagine, too, mine own feeling of futility when I try to use a few of the lines I memorized so diligently in my book of common French phrases, and am properly squelched by a polite but firm French salesperson who answers my questions in perfect English and makes that the language of our transaction.

It took me a couple of days to realize that Paris in August is not nearly so much the capital of France as it is a suburb of the United States. It is our American women who are attending the openings of the smart couturiers whose names are as familiar in America as they are in France. And the Parisienne shopkeepers will tell you it is the American women who wear the smart frocks and determine the style trend today.

Regarding the true Parisienne, I learned from a cabman, formerly from Hoboken, N. J., who still retains the American slang current in the early twentieth century, that she has withdrawn to a fashionable watering place, or if she be aristocratic but poor, she draws the curtains of her Paris mansion, and does not leave her portals before September, thus giving the effect of having been away. So we Americans share the fashionable hotels, sidewalk cafes, theaters and music halls with the other tourists.

Some Painless Extraction

But if the Parisienne has deserted us, the couturiers have no. The fashionable dressmaking establishments with their Ritz prices are receiving us with open arms. They have put out for us an assortment of apparel designed to make us part painlessly with our good American dollars and drag us to a state where we know not what we do, and our only salvation is to be bound, lugged to the boat, and aimed toward home.

And this winter, according to indications, the place to find the typical Parisienne will be in the good old U. S. A.

FASHIONS IN FALL FOOTWEAR

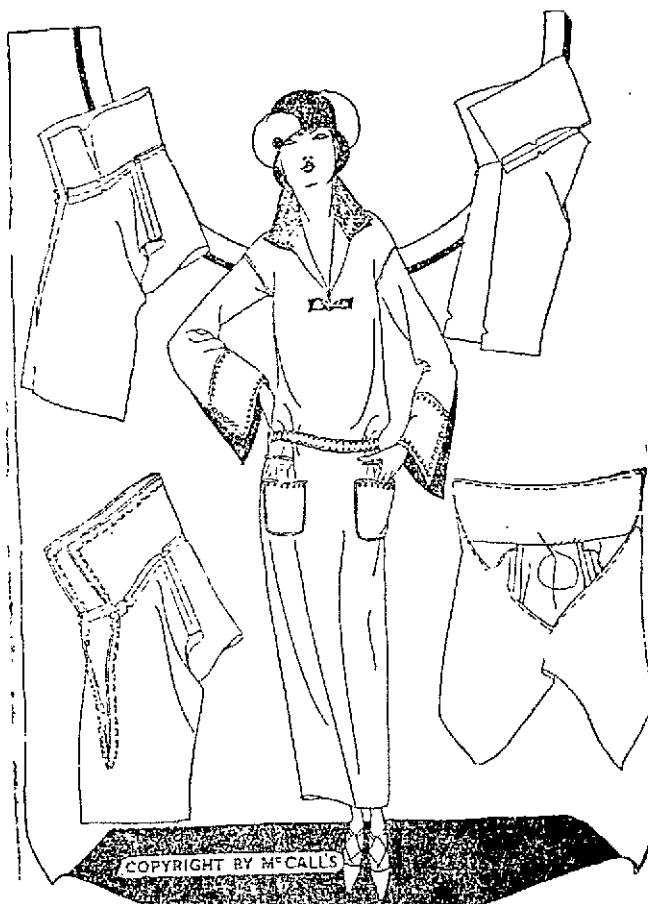

Opening Fall Season in New York With Many Strictly Tailored, Some Good Models

Fully realizing the danger of the radical novelty and how it may become a positive menace to good business, the designers and shoemakers of New York are opening up the fall season with advancing models which are as splendid a collection of smart and practical footwear as has been shown in the shops for some seasons past.

While the leathers and colors chosen closely follow those now being shown in Paris the lasts are decidedly different. While Paris is in favor of a slender pointed vamp, we still cling to a medium short vamp with a rounded toe. Then too we are offering many more models with a regulation military heel. The modified Spanish heel is good and for dress wear the full Spanish is shown. The shoes for the fall season can easily be placed in three distinctive groups, general wear models, semi-dress, formal and later we are told a particularly interesting collection of decorative evening slippers will be offered.

America, always noted for the making of the perfectly plain, strictly tailored shoe, has certainly gone back to this type for fall. In the general wear class, we find one and two strap pumps in tan calf, dull black kid, patent leather and gray and beige suede, or buck. Many of the models are equipped with a regulation military heel and decorated with perforations.

How to Sew a Collar and Facing to a Garment

Collars like these are very smart just now on tailored blouses and on one-piece dresses. They look a bit complicated, but are really easy enough to make if one works carefully.

The dress is slit down the front for the opening. The collar is cut of double material, one to be used for facing.

FRENCH SOLID BLACK DISPLAY BEING FEATURED

By the sudden staging of its two large Chestnut street show windows with a notable display of women's advance fall footwear styles in black suede, patent leather and black satin in almost equal numbers, with a few black kid models and a mere suggestion of gold slippers and tan pumps as a relief, Winkelman's, Philadelphia, created a new sensation in shoe circles.

Simultaneously with this window display of almost solid black, while light browns and grays and even a few models of bright colored footwear are lingering in the majority of stores, black pumps were being featured also in the Winkelman store on 42nd street, New York City.

"We knew that Paris dressmakers favor black frocks for early fall wear and that brown models also are appearing in the salons of not a few couturiers," explained Winkelman. "Black footwear lends itself especially well to these tones. Then, too, black slippers contrast pleasantly with the color selections for fall hoisery."

Most of the models are dress pumps and slippers. There is a preponderance of side gores, lattice straps, one and two-strap designs, a few Colonial and Cuban for lattice pumps of plain and informal ensemble, especially in black kid. Tailored pumps of patent calf with ornamental white stitching on toe and vamp have their place, and an occasional buckle glints from an evening slipper, signaling that this model again will have its share in the vogue.

stitch. Close seam at lower part of facing below opening.

Before turning the collar right side out, trim the edges close to the stitching line. Then turn. Baste all around opening and collar close to the edge.

Turn under raw edges of front facing and stitch. Slip stitch the upper edge of the facing to the shoulder and slip stitch the back of the collar to cover the seam.

You can't keep a secret and tell it too.

Your Health

by Dr. C.C. Robinson

Baby's Teeth
Teething is a normal process in baby's development. With right feeding and careful attention to health, it should cause no more trouble than growing nails or fat cells. But parental ignorance has blamed it for all kinds of alarming ills.

Don't let your baby have to endure the distress and oftentimes disaster of such ailments as fever, carache, diarrhea, swollen glands and convulsions, on the theory that teething's bound to cause them and that baby has to grin or cry and bear it. Call the physician and have him attend to the real trouble at once.

Some pains and fretfulness are frequently present at different teething periods. They seem to occur more in bottle-fed babies than the other kind. Do not seek relief by lancing of swollen gums. It is dangerous and may cause infection. If fever is present, the physician will find the cause in urine, throat, chest or ears, and remedy it. "Teethers" are useless and dangerous. Grandma's old ivory teething ring is much better for baby to chew.

Champion

The teeth should appear in pairs. The usual interval between pairs is from three to eight weeks. The first pair should appear at the eighth month; two or three more pairs by the twelfth month; at two and one-half years, there should be 10 pairs.

Don't be distressed if some irregularity occurs. It often does, but is best taken care of by proper feeding. Clean baby's teeth when you can count ten or twelve. Use an application with a solution of baking soda and water. One teaspoonful to eight ounces of water. Brush the teeth after the second year.

ONLY EXPERIENCED CLOWNS IN JOHN ROBINSON CIRCUS

Several years ago, every big circus made use of their property men in clown alley, but now the day of the fill-in clown, the ring employee, who whitens his face to swell the ranks of the fun-makers, is over, at least with the John Robinson Circus and trained wild animals. This circus, now on its 100th anniversary tour of the United States and Canada will appear in Middlesboro on Wednesday, September 19.

The John Robinson management has a policy of never engaging a clown without many years of experience, as the big circus cannot take time to break in amateurs. When ever a recruit asks for a position, he is advised to secure training with some of the smaller shows and circuses. After he has graduated into the front ranks of the jostling profession, then to return and he will be engaged.

There are exactly fifty-one "Joers" with the John Robinson Circus, and all of them are well known in the clown alleys of the big top. They are well known because they have learned to put their antics and their pantomime "across" under the big top. Since the days of Johnny Lawlor, Sr., the John Robinson Circus has asserted its claims to the best and biggest contingent of "Joers" anywhere. As the show are toured in white top pants, and a headliner the list will be found also includes the cowboy Joe; Silvers Johnson, Emmett Kelly, Fred DeMack, Fred Nelson, Henry Blum, Billy Sells, Walter Parker, Harold Nicholson and others.

BIG TENT ON FESTIVAL LOT

The Harvest Festival, a fair promoted by the Middlesboro Merchants Association to stimulate agricultural and other rural interests in this section and to maintain harmonious relations between merchants of Middlesboro and residents out of town sections, will open here on the vacant lots at the intersection of Twenty-second street on Thursday, September 20 and continue through Saturday, September 22.

Residents of Bell, Claiborne and Lee counties, all local people and residents of this section or any other who are interested in such exhibitions are invited to attend. Exhibits, a detailed list of which follows in this issue, may be entered by residents of the three counties above named.

These will be displayed in the big tent on the Festival lot in a manner to be later designated by the committee. Dates for entering the exhibits vary, this information also being contained with the detailed prize lists.

S. M. Reams, president of the Merchants' Association, requests that all persons having poultry exhibits to enter at the Harvest Festival communicate with him at once and state the number of fowls they will have so that he can reserve a coop.

TO ERECT BOOTHS ON GROUNDS SOON

Merchants Will Show Their Own Products As Well as Novelty Displays

Pools for use of members of the Merchants Association will be erected on the Harvest Festival grounds soon. These will contain a variety of products sold by the merchants as well as attractive novelty displays.

There will be forty of the booths, each of which will be eight feet square. S. M. Reams, president of the association, says there have been many requests for space of this kind from business establishments and members of the association that could not be filled.

The booths will be built around the two sides of the lot. They will be constructed of trim work and tin pipe and each will have an electric light. L. A. Whelan, chairman of the committee, promises to have everything in readiness so that the merchants may arrange their exhibits by the time the festival opens.

According to the plans now being discussed, space will be left between the row of booths on the east side of the lot and the adjacent brick buildings for use as automobile display space. It is understood that several car dealers will want to display at the festival.
